

Worth Knowing.
Mr. W. H. Morgan, Lake City, Fla., was taken with a severe cold, attended with a distressing cough and running into consumption in its first stages. Finally tried Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and found immediate relief, and after using about a half dozen bottles found himself well and has had no return of the disease. No other remedy can show so grand a record of cures, as Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption is guaranteed to do just what is claimed of it. Trial bottle free at Hodgkinson & Co.'s drug store.

If I Were You.
Why did he look so grave? she asked. "What might it be trouble?" "My little maid," he sighing said, "Suppose that you were me, and you a wretched secret owner. Pray, tell me what you'd do?" "I think I'd tell it somebody," said she. "If I were you?" But still he sighed and looked askance. Despite her sympathy, "Oh, tell me, little maid," he said. Again, "If you were me, and if you loved a pretty lass, O then what would you do?" "I think I'd go and tell her so," said she. "If I were you?" "My little maid, 'tis you," he said, "Alone are dear to me." "Ah then, she turned away her head, And never a word said she. But what he whispered in her ear, And what she answered too— O no, I cannot tell you this; I'd guess, if I were you!"

Slander.
Twas but a breath— And yet the fact, good name was witted, And friends once fond grew cold and stilled, And life was worse than death. One venomed word, That struck its coward poison blow, In craven whisper hushed and low— And yet the wide world heard. 'Twas but one whisper—one, That muttered low for very shame, The thing the slander dare not name— And yet its work was done.

HOW A SIOUX DIES.
A Strange Sight That a Traveler Saw in a Lonely Tepee.

In 1861 I was hunting some lost horses in the broken country west of the Big Horn River. I had ridden all the morning over a country that was strange to me. About 11 o'clock I crossed a plateau and was surprised to come suddenly to the edge of a canyon, the existence of which I had not even suspected. In the canyon was a stream with clumps of cottonwood timber along its banks, and in one of the open spaces was an Indian lodge. The Indians that hunted in that country were peaceable, but the war was just over and the Sioux were feeling rather sore. If they were Crows or Arapahoes I might get some information about my horses.

I lay down and watched. No smoke came from the tepee; no one moved around it; half a dozen ponies grazed a few hundred yards distant. There was not even a dog, which looked rather suspicious. After waiting five minutes I knew no more than a first. Suddenly three white-tail deer came from the timber and walked leisurely across the opening. Then I knew that the camp was deserted, and the strangeness of it startled me. I mounted and rode down to the creek and straight to the tepee. I threw back the flap, and I shall remember what I saw until death. In the center of the tepee was spread a large buffalo robe, and on the robe were guns and scalp and many arrows; and there was also food done up as for a journey; and, sitting cross-legged around the robe, were six braves of the Sioux Nation. All were in their prime, all decked out in war paint and each one held a bow and arrow in his hand. On every face was an expression of calm indifference, as of one who neither suffers nor enjoys, neither hopes nor fears. The faces were those of dead men, and the smallpox had marked them with its awful mark. They took their misery with their heads up, and even the horrors of this disease could have upon their hearts no stain of fear, upon their brows no mark of suffering. And this that their God might judge them men, and fit them to pitch their camps forever in the groves and green fields of Paradise.

The Man About Town.
Said a young lady: "We never know the men we meet in society."

"Why?" I asked her. "Because they won't let us," was the reply, and then she delivered a short but eloquent discourse on the manner of intercourse between young ladies and gentlemen who revolve in the fashionable world. She rallied the reasons for the above sweeping statement around the pivotal point that men are artificial when they meet women beneath the glare of chandeliers and among the subtle influences of the drawing-room or dancing-hall. "It seems to me that when the average young man does his evening toilet he discards his identity and assumes a sphinx-like role. It must be that he deems this suppression of his originality the attitude in which women will best like him, but I assure that a lady of intelligence does not appreciate this absence of personality in the men she meets. We don't really like to see men whom we perceive we must at some time from the force of circumstances select for our husbands surrounded by an artificiality which forbids our accurate knowledge of their characteristics."

Thackeray's First Glimpse of America.
Broadway is miles upon miles long, a rush of life such as I never have seen, not so full as the Strand, but so rapid. The houses are always being torn down and built up again, the railroad cars drive slap into the midst of the city. There are barricades and scaffolding hanging everywhere. I have not been into a house except the country ones, but something new is being done to it, and the hammering is jarring in the passage, or a wall, or steps are down, or the family is going to move. Nobody is quiet here, no more an I. The rush and restlessness please me, and I like, for a little, the bustle of the town. I am not received as a guest, which I like too. There is one paper which goes on every morning saying I am a snob, and I don't say so. Six people were reading it at breakfast this morning, and the man opposite me popped it under the tablecloth. But the other papers roar with approbation.

Do to-day's duty, fight to-day's temptation, and do not weaken and distract yourself by looking forward to things which you cannot see, and could not understand if you saw them.

EVERY NIGHT I SCRATCHED

Until the Skin was Raw. Body Covered with scales like spots of mortar. Cured by the Cuticura Remedies.
I am going to tell you of the extraordinary cures your Cuticura Remedies performed on me. About the first of April last I noticed some red pimples like corns on all over my body, but thought nothing of it until some time later on, when it began to look like spots of mortar spotted on, and which came off in layers, accompanied with itching. I would scratch every night until I was raw, and then the next night the scales began to fall off. I consulted all the doctors in the country, but without success. I happened to see an advertisement in the newspaper about your Cuticura Remedies, and I purchased them from my drug store. I began to notice that the scales gradually dropped off and disappeared one by one, and have been cured. I had the disease thirteen months before I began taking the Cuticura Remedies, and in four or five weeks was entirely cured. My disease was eczema and psoriasis. I recommended the Cuticura Remedies to all in my vicinity, and I know of a great many who have taken them and thank me for the knowledge of them, especially mothers who have babies with scaly eruptions on their heads and bodies. I cannot express in words the thanks to you for what the Cuticura Remedies have been to me. My body was covered with scales, and I was an awful spectacle to behold. Now my skin is as nice and clear as a baby's.

THERE is one thing, says an exchange, that Blaine will doubtless accomplish if the Republicans shall elect the next President—for in that event he will be either the President or the Secretary of State—and that is the establishment of a more intimate relationship between the United States and other American nations.

Few people understand the advantage which such a reformation would insure. Brazil alone has an area nearly equal to the United States; her imports and exports amount to about $200,000,000 annually, of which about $90,000,000 are exports. The United States takes about $50,000,000 (principally coffee, rubber and cocoa); she imports from the United States only about $6,000,000, consisting principally of flour, lard, petroleum and some manufactured goods. Europe furnished her last year about $100,000,000 of merchandise, a very large item being manufactures of cotton (manufactured in Europe largely from cotton raised in the United States).

The Argentine Republic has copied our constitution and many of our laws; its dollars are the equivalent of ours; its people are prosperous and progressive; its government is firmly established. It asks for closer commercial relations, and for this purpose the Argentine Republic established a free information bureau in the United States of North America; for this purpose it offered $100,000 gold annually, to establish direct mail service to our country. One of its large banking firms is composed of pure and unadulterated Yankees, energetic men of the highest character. Horses and cattle are being shipped from there here, some of them via Europe. Its foreign commerce amounts to $200,000,000 annually, of which the United States gets about $11,000,000. Our trade with South America might be made extremely profitable if Blaine's scheme of confederation were consummated.

A California paper wonders, says the Eureka Sentinel, that Senator Jones of Nevada did not take a more prominent part in the recent silver debate in the Senate. That is easily accounted for. The amendment was Senator Stewart's and it was eminently proper that Senator Stewart should have charge of the subject on the floor. It is, indeed, the customary parliamentary procedure for the author of a measure to do the principal battling for it until it is disposed of. The rule is observed in both Houses of Congress. It would not be viewed as strictly courteous for a member to intrude to the detriment of his colleagues. In other words, each member is entitled to his own thunder and all he can make out of it in the nature of popular grandiloquence. Senator Jones saw that the fight was being well handled by Senator Stewart, and such being the case it was his place to leave the entire management to that gentleman. No doubt if a critical moment had arrived, where the friends of silver needed aid, the senior Senator from Nevada would have gotten "his ear in" in effective shape. But it was not needed, and so he allowed those who had inaugurated the contest to fight it to a successful finish, which was the correct thing to do from a parliamentary standpoint. Besides, Senator Jones sowed good seed in the interest of silver in his great speech of years ago. It is the fruits of that speech that are being gathered now. If all men in public life were as true and as effective in the silver interest as Senator Jones has proven himself to be, we would soon have free and unlimited silver coinage in this country.

MORE than a quarter of a century has passed since Nevadans turned out to suppress the insurrection of the Pintos. Many of the best and bravest did not return from the conflicts and many of those who did lost all they had. From time to time efforts have been made to have the government make good the losses incurred. Each attempt was futile. At this late day Senator Stewart has undertaken the work of having the claims for supplies and losses adjusted. He introduced a bill providing for that end. He has not allowed it to be buried by the committee to which it was referred, but looked after it with his characteristic energy, and secured a favorable report. It now looks as if the measure will soon be passed and that those who are living and the representatives of the dead will soon get what justice demanded they should have had long since.

THE MINING QUESTION.

A Topic of Great Interest to Stock Speculators.

The San Francisco Call says: The output of the Comstock lode is larger than it has been for any time for ten years. Pay ore is being discovered in mine after mine; regular dividends on the best mines seem assured, and yet, in the face of this, not only is the mining share market in a condition approaching panic, but the volume of business is one-half what it was at this time last year, when the future yield of the lode was a mere matter of conjecture.

An article published in this column a few weeks ago on the subject attracted the attention of the Stock Exchange, and a committee was raised to inquire into the causes of the anomaly. The Committee consisted of the most responsible and conservative members of a body which is not, as a rule, overflowing with conservatism or responsibility. They were men of means and character. They have been in conference with owners of mills and trustees of mines, and have devoted much thought and study to the problems before them. They have discovered that the task they undertook was of much larger dimensions than they imagined, and they have found out that reforms in this, as in all other affairs, are not to be accomplished without friction. While they have been met with frankness and a spirit of conciliation in some quarters, in others their inquiries have been resented as impudence and repelled with rudeness. Still they have done some good. They have thrown light on matters which were dark, and have cleared the way for substantial reform hereafter. If they are let alone and loyally supported by the board, as they would be to accomplish something for the brokerage business, and may save the Exchange from the doom which now seems impending.

The difficult questions in the controversy turn on mills, proxies and the powers of Trustees. At the present time the mines do not own their own mills, and the stockholders in the former claim that the latter exact so exorbitant a charge for milling that there is nothing left for dividends. To this the mill-owners reply that they are quite willing to sell their mills to the mines for what they cost. The trouble is that the mines have no money to buy with, and the stockholders would not submit to be assessed for the purpose. To ask the mill-owners to sell their mills on credit would be to ask them to guarantee the future output of the mines. This seems a pretty tough nut to crack.

Then the brokers claim that these Trustees who own the mills and run the mines are re-elected every year by proxies begged of brokers, and they propose to abolish or limit the proxy system. It is hard to see how the right of a man who has stock in his name to dispose of his proxy as he pleases can be denied by the board. Such an act would be ultra vires. If the brokers who transfer stock to their mills do not like the way the mines are managed they can vote out the Trustees if they have proxies enough. If the stockholders want a change they can put their stock in their own names, and vote it on election day. But the proposition that proxies want generally assented to in this country is childish. In this country majorities rule, in companies as in politics.

Whether the mines are being, as a rule, managed for the benefit of their stockholders, is a question which interests these two classes of persons rather than the public. There is plenty of law in this State to compel a trustee to perform his duty, and to punish him if he does not. We are told of cases where a large proportion of the stock of a company is in the company's safe, and a resolution of the board authorizing the President to sell it at public or private sale at his pleasure. This amounts to giving him a call on the stock at his own price, unlimited as to time, and is of course indefensible. We notice another company, which is extracting 100 tons of ore per day, and of which the stock is never traded regularly assessed 50 cents a share every three or four months. Surely it would be fairer to the stockholders to shut this mine down, and a court, on proper representations, would probably order it shut down. Trustees have no right to keep a mine running by levying assessments in order to provide for their private mills.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEVITIES.

—The Times Vienna correspondent says the rumors that the Emperor of Brazil will abdicate are denied. The Emperor will soon return to Brazil.

—The Senate Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds yesterday passed favorably upon the bills for public buildings at San Diego, to cost $200,000.

—M. Logrand, a wealthy cooper, who, it was charged, bought his decoration as a member of the Legion of Honor from M. Wilson, has been expelled from the order.

—Fred Tarke, a prominent Sutter county (Cal.) farmer, living near West Butte, was kicked in the abdomen by a horse on Saturday afternoon and died the following day.

—Minister Phelps has been asked whether he would accept the Chief Justiceship if offered to him. All the responses he would make was, "It is too soon to talk about that."

A GREAT LOOKOUT.

Over Five Thousand Brewery Employees Idle.

NEW YORK, April 17.—The brewery lookout has begun, and more than 5,000 brewers, brewery wagon drivers, malsters, helpers, wagonmakers, cooper, painters and apprentices in this city, Brooklyn, Jersey City, Newark, Paterson and Staten Island are out of work.

The financial week of the workmen ended at noon to-day, and according to the instructions of the unions, every brewer in every one of the above named cities returned to work as usual this morning, and there were few outward indications that the greatest lookout that has ever occurred in this section of the country would occur in a few hours. Just before noon the proprietors of each brewery met their men and informed them that their services were no longer wanted, that they had unanimously decided to be their own bosses, and would not submit to anything dictatorial from their men. However, if the men sought re-employment as individuals, and would disconnect themselves from the unions, they would get work. The men passed quietly to the cashiers' desks after they had heard what the proprietors had to say, received their weekly pay and departed. At noon, according to agreement, every brewer, wagon driver and cooper for a time is suspended.

A FINANCIAL ENIGMA.

Some of the Complications Connected With the Bond Purchase Bill.

WASHINGTON, April 17.—The delay in concurrent legislation on the Bond Purchase bill is causing considerable concern in government financial circles. This question at this moment turns out to be of a more complicated nature than was at first supposed. The volume of circulation medium is now less than eleven hundred millions in round numbers, comprising $36,000,000 National Bank circulation, $350,000,000 legal tenders, $190,000,000 silver certificates, $20,000,000 gold certificates, $5,000,000 silver dollars, and $40,000,000 subsidiary silver. The Beck amendment is designed to meet the immediate exigencies of the situation. It is antagonized by the policy of the administration, but has a majority in either house of Congress, as has been shown in the Senate on the proposition itself, and in the House on the canvass on several propositions.

Suicide at Sacramento.
SACRAMENTO, April 17.—John Leck, an employee of the railroad shops, committed suicide in a hotel this morning by shooting himself through the heart. He was a native of England, aged thirty-two years. Dependence on account of illness caused the suicide. He has a brother residing on Polk street, San Francisco.
